

I believe BellSouth's petition should be denied. I fear that a move in favor of BellSouth would only serve to reduce competition, especially in suburban or more rural areas where Bellsouth has little financial interest to bring broadband to the masses. In these places independent companies are often the only ones willing to bring DSL to an area and they require the participation of the incumbent to do so.